It is discussed item by item, in sufficient detail to show how the sense of self that goes with one's individual personality can be shed. The idea is to continue to act completely natural and to do all those things expected of a human being in one's particular status, position, etc. just as clover grows and behaves exactly as it should in its particular status and position. Clover has no mind or the functions associated with the mind; the human being then acts just as normally as the clover ...
